Liposuction

Liposuction, or lipoplasty, is a cosmetic procedure designed to shape and slim specific parts of the body by removing excess fat, which helps to improve body contours and proportions, ultimately boosting self-confidence.

Even with a healthy lifestyle and regular exercise, some people struggle with uneven body shape due to stubborn fat deposits. These fat pockets may be influenced by genetics or other factors unrelated to fitness or weight control.

Liposuction can target persistent fat in various areas, including the thighs, arms, neck, hips, waist, back, inner knees, chest, cheeks, chin, calves, and ankles.

Procedures

Liposuction targets different body areas in men and women. For women, the most common treatment sites include the abdomen, breasts, hips (often called "saddlebags"), outer thighs, front thighs, inner thighs, knees, arms, buttocks, cheeks, and neck. Men, who make up about 15% to 25% of liposuction patients, typically seek treatment for the chin and neck area, abdomen, flanks (also known as "love handles"), and breasts.

Liposuction

Liposuction, or lipoplasty, is a cosmetic procedure designed to shape and slim specific parts of the body by removing excess fat, which helps to improve body contours and proportions, ultimately boosting self-confidence.

Even with a healthy lifestyle and regular exercise, some people struggle with uneven body shape due to stubborn fat deposits. These fat pockets may be influenced by genetics or other factors unrelated to fitness or weight control.

Liposuction can target persistent fat in various areas, including the thighs, arms, neck, hips, waist, back, inner knees, chest, cheeks, chin, calves, and ankles.

Procedures

Liposuction targets different body areas in men and women. For women, the most common treatment sites include the abdomen, breasts, hips (often called "saddlebags"), outer thighs, front thighs, inner thighs, knees, arms, buttocks, cheeks, and neck. Men, who make up about 15% to 25% of liposuction patients, typically seek treatment for the chin and neck area, abdomen, flanks (also known as "love handles"), and breasts.

Before:

Age : The patient's age plays a significant role in the success of liposuction. Women under 50 often report higher levels of satisfaction with their results.

Anterior Thighs Liposuction : When treating the front of the thighs, achieving a smooth, even surface is more critical than removing the maximum amount of fat.

Arm Liposuction : Tumescent liposuction of the arms using microcannulas yields excellent cosmetic results. Patients frequently report high levels of satisfaction with arm liposuction.

Hanging Skin : A drooping flap of skin that hangs from a fat arm when it's held horizontally can be removed with tumescent liposuction using microcannulas. This approach, which involves liposuction almost entirely around the arm, eliminates the weight of fat on the skin, allowing the skin's natural elasticity to create a dramatic improvement.

Anterior Axillary Fat Pads : These fat pads are found on the chest just in front of the armpit. They tend to become more noticeable with age and increasing obesity. A tightly fitting bra can cause these fat pads to bulge unattractively above the bra line.

Posterior Axillary Fat Pads : These are located just behind the armpit on the side of the back. In some women, they can be a cosmetic issue. Liposuction of these fat pads is often done at the same time as arm liposuction. Compression garments are used to keep the area in place during recovery.

Surgical Technique : Microcannulas allow for an aggressive approach to liposuction of the arms while minimizing the risk of uneven skin texture. Several small incisions (1.0 mm and 1.5 mm) provide access to the entire circumference of the arm but heal quickly, especially in patients with light skin.

Female Back Liposuction : Liposuction of the female back can lead to noticeable improvements. Tumescent liposuction with microcannulas can remove localized "bra fat," resulting in a significant aesthetic enhancement.

Female Breast Liposuction – Breast Reduction Surgery : Tumescent liposuction of the female breast, using only local anesthesia, can lead to significant breast reduction and a moderate but pleasing breast lift.

Face and Neck Liposuction : Tumescent liposuction is typically the safest and most effective method for removing fat from the chin, cheeks, and jowls. This procedure has fewer complications and scars, avoids the risks of general anesthesia, allows for faster recovery, and usually results in a more natural appearance compared to a facelift.

Inner Thigh Liposuction : The inner thigh is a common area of concern for women seeking liposuction. This procedure can greatly improve the thigh's silhouette and reduce inner thigh chafing. The ideal outcome involves no significant lumpiness, irregular shape, or visible signs of surgical intervention.

Outer Thighs Liposuction : Fat on the thighs and hips in women is often influenced by genetics and may resist exercise and dieting. For many women, liposuction on these areas means they feel more comfortable in their clothes and less self-conscious in swimwear.

Recovery after Liposuction : Most patients are able to leave the hospital the same day. They can resume light household chores in 2-3 days, shower from the third day onward, and wear pressure garments for up to six weeks. Edema, bruising, and other side effects may take up to six weeks to resolve completely.
